Project Overview:

This report presents three front-end website case studies created with HTML and CSS: an online shopping store, an online food ordering interface, and a bakery and cake shop. Each case study includes page screenshots, a summary of the visible design, and its main interface elements.

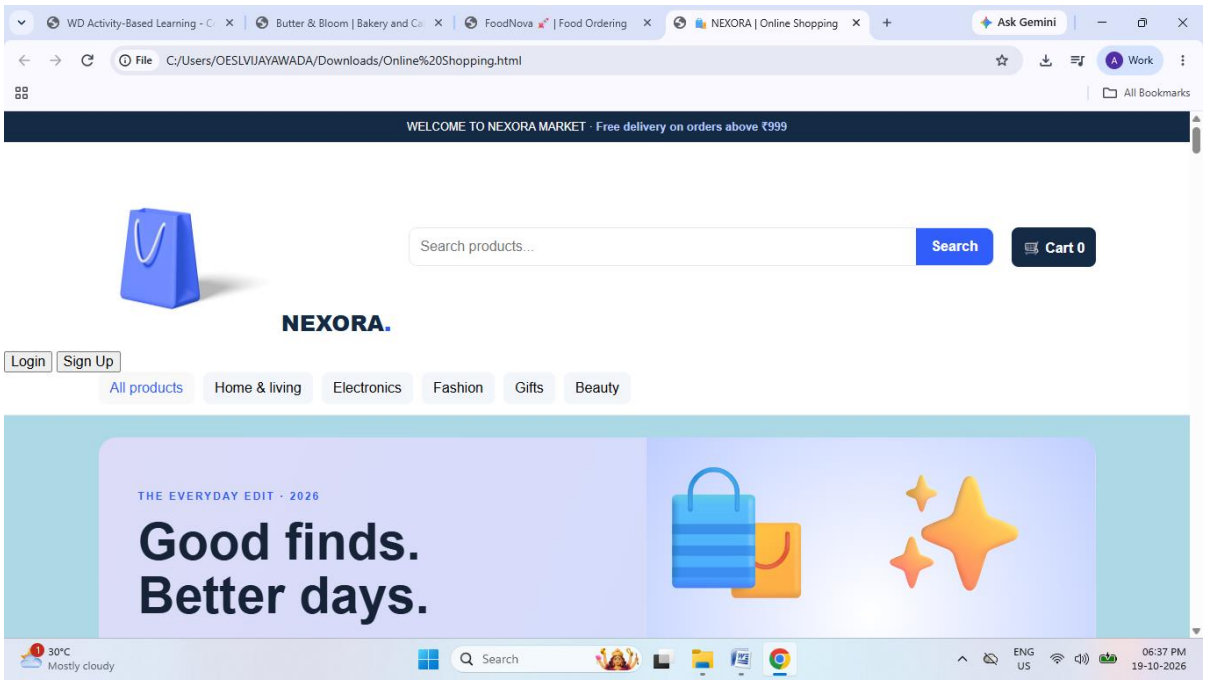

01 Online Shopping: NEXORA - retail product Catalogue.	02 Food Ordering: FoodNova - menu and food cards.	03 CakeVerse : CakeVerse - bakery catalogue.

1. Online Shopping Website – NEXORA:

Purpose:

present a product storefront with search, category navigation, product information, prices, ratings, and shopping controls.

Screenshots of Website-

Main interface elements*:

- Header with search field, cart count, login and sign-up controls.
- Category navigation, promotional banner, and product catalogue cards.
- Product prices, ratings, details, and Add to Cart / Buy Now controls.
- Responsive CSS breakpoints for smaller screens.

Technologies and* scope: HTML page structure with CSS styling and responsive layout. This is a front-end store demonstration.

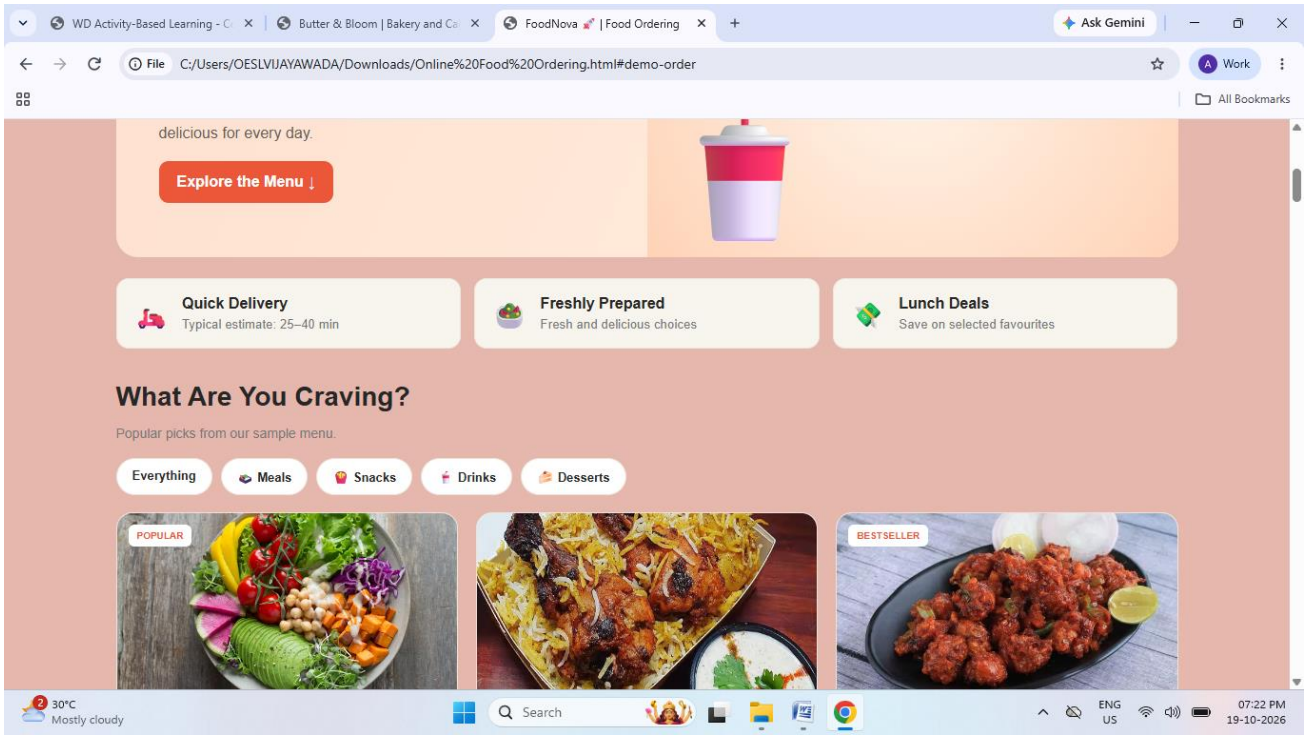

2.Online Food Ordering Website – FoodNova:

Purpose*:

show a food-ordering menu with meal categories, item details, pricing, ratings, and order information.

Main interface elements :

- Bakery landing section with promotional copy and product navigation.
- Product cards with descriptions, ratings, prices, and Add controls.
- Custom cake request form and shopping bag / checkout interface.
- Responsive styles for tablet and mobile widths.

Technologies and scope: HTML and CSS with page scripts and modal-style cart / checkout interface included in the source.

Consolidated Summary :

The three case studies apply common web design patterns to different business needs. NEXORA focuses on retail products; FoodNova focuses on menu browsing and food categories; CakeVerse focuses on bakery products and custom cake requests. Together, the projects demonstrate page layout, navigation, product cards, form interfaces, pricing display, and responsive CSS.
